THE BEST WAY TO LEARN: PLAYING

Learning chess, a strategy game of great depth, has benefits for all ages, however, in the case of children, it helps them in a special way to awaken their intellectual abilities and develop logical thinking earlier.

At Lakeside we see chess classes as a mental gym that promotes our children's ability to concentrate, think strategically, have fun and cooperate, allowing them to work on many important aspects of Mathematics but also boosting other cognitive and social skills. It is not about teaching chess in a competitive way or for the simple fact of knowing how to play, but for the mental skills that are also developed in other disciplines.

Learning chess helps our Lakesiders to structure their thinking, solve problems, think, make decisions, analyze, pay attention, concentrate, strengthen their visual memory and perception... It also helps them to know how to plan and to be mentally rigorous and orderly. In addition, at Lakeside we teach through multiple intelligences: with stories, the giant board, different songs... In this way, students can learn chess in the way that is most comfortable for them.

Without leaving aside that they gain self-esteem and self-confidence, improve their communication and comprehension skills, understand the value of work, commitment and concentration. It also improves their spatiality, understanding of geometry and reading ability.

The benefits of chess are wide and go from childrens' and youngsters' academic performance to their behavior, because it also involves the social and human dimensions, favoring empathy and respect for others.
